

John Whelpton studied classics at the University of Oxford and then lectured in English at Shri Thakur Ram (Birganj) and Amrit Science (Kathmandu) campuses of Tribhuvan University from 1972 to 1974. After taking a doctorate at SOAS, London, where he was an editor of South Asia Research and occasional teacher of Nepali, he moved to Hong Kong, from where he makes regular visits to Kathmandu. His main publications are Jang Bahadur in Europe (1983), Nepal (World Bibliographical Series, 1990), Kings, Soldiers and Priests: Nepalese Politics and the Rise of Jang Bahadur Rana, 1830-57 (1991), (ed. with D.N. Gellner and J. Pfaff-Czarnecka) Nationalism and Ethnicity in a Hindu Kingdom (1997), and (ed. with Martin Hoftun and William Raeper) People, Politics and Ideology: Democracy and Social Change in Nepal (1999).

Pancha N. Maharjan is Lecturer at the Centre for Nepal and Asian Studies, Tribhuvan University, Kathmandu. His doctorate, from Banaras Hindu University in 1995, was on 'Electoral Politics in Nepal: A Study of 1981 and 1986 National Panchayat Elections'. He was a Visiting Fellow at International Institute of Asian Studies in Leiden and a British Academy Visiting Fellow in the UK in 1999. He has carried out extensive fieldwork on elections in Nepal. Among his publications are Local Elections in Nepal, 1997 (CNAS, 1998) and (with others) People, Polity and Governance: A Survey Analysis of Peoples' Response to the Democratic Experiment in Nepal (Kathmandu, 1996).

Michael Mühlich studied ethnology in Berlin, presenting his MA in 1990 on the 'Social structure of the Brahman-Chetris in Nepal'. He went on to conduct research on the culture of the Sherpas and in 1994 received his doctorate at the University of Freiburg, published in 1996 as Traditionelle Opposition: Individualität und Weltbild der Sherpa. He has taught at the universities of Berlin and Leipzig. With support from the German Research Council (DFG), he has since 1997 conducted research on credit systems and urban development in Nepal. He has published articles on the Sherpas, the Manangis, the Newars, and the Brahmans and Chetris.

Charles Ramble received a DPhil in Social Anthropology from Oxford University in 1985. His thesis concentrated on a community of Tibetan Bonpo lamas in Mustang, Nepal. After a period of post-doctoral research in Mustang and Tibet, he spent several years working as a naturalist and anthropologist in national parks in southern and eastern Nepal. Between 1992 and 1997 he was engaged as a Tibetologist on a multi-disciplinary research project in Mustang, in association with the Universities of Bonn and Berlin. He is currently a researcher at the Institute of Social and Cultural Anthropology, University of Vienna.

Karma Phuntsho is writing a DPhil on Miphram at the University of Oxford. Trained at the Nyingma Institute in Byalakuppe, Karnataka, he was the abbot of a nunnery in Dharamsala.